HISTORICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

Born in 1922 in St. Louis, Thomas Dunbar Graham moved to Jefferson City as a child and graduated from Jefferson City High School in 1940. He was orphaned while still in high school and was raised partially by his aunt, Nona Robertson. After military service in World War II and studying at the University of Missouri in Columbia, he set up his law practice in 1949 and filed as a Democratic candidate for Cole County representative to the Missouri House of Representatives in 1950. Winning election that year and in successive years until his retirement early in 1973, his twenty-two-year career spanned a tumultuous time in American history.

In 1961, Graham was elected to the first of three successive terms as Speaker of the House, serving in that capacity until 1967. He was chair of the following committees: Judiciary (1955-1960), Legislative Research (1967-68), Insurance (1969-70), and Military and Veterans Affairs (1971-72). As Speaker of the House from 1961-1967, he was an ex officio member of all committees. From 1962-65, he was appointed to the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and was on the Special Committee on Uniform State Unfair Competition Acts. In 1966-1967, he served as president of the National Legislative Conference.

Some of Graham's local accomplishments in Jefferson City were his support of the Capitol Parking Garage, funding for Lincoln University, and pay and benefits for state workers, particularly prison workers and the state highway patrol. Evincing an interest in historical preservation unusual in his era, his support was critical in saving Lohman's Landing in Jefferson City and procuring funding to acquire the site of Wilson's Creek Battlefield. Although there was talk of Graham running for statewide office in the mid-to-late 1960s, nothing ever materialized, and his high-profile battles with Governor Warren E. Hearnes curtailed a promising career that had once been called of "almost limitless potential in the government of Missouri."

Although of the same party, Graham and Hearnes locked horns over several issues, namely consecutive terms for governors (so-called gubernatorial succession) and reapportionment. Although he had helped Hearnes pass the great majority of the governor's agenda in the well-regarded 73rd General Assembly, Graham felt strongly that the legislative branch should be a check, not a rubber stamp, of the executive branch. Hence, in the 74th General Assembly, in a bitterly contested Democratic caucus that drew allegations of gubernatorial arm-twisting, Graham was deposed as speaker in favor of Hearnes' choice of James E. Godfrey from St. Louis.

The legislative issue that brought Graham into the national spotlight but also contributed to his loss of the speakership was his stance on reapportionment. A firm believer in the constitutional wisdom of checks and balances, he supported the "Little Federal" system in state legislature, with one chamber apportioned on the basis of population and the other on geography (primarily county representation). He felt that if both chambers were to be based strictly on population, the legislature would essentially become unicameral and dominated by urban interests.

However, starting in 1962 with Baker v. Carr, a series of US Supreme Court decisions successively challenged the right of states to apportion their legislatures on any other basis besides population. Using the "equal protection" clause of the 14th amendment to back the principle of "one man, one vote," they ruled it was unconstitutional for some citizens (e.g., rural) to have a greater proportional vote in state government than their peers in urban areas. In Missouri, the issue was primarily one of "big city political machines" versus "horse and buggy legislatures" rather than one of race (with most African-Americans in urban areas), although the issue was occasionally raised.

Graham was not alone in his stance, as state legislators across the country passed resolutions against reapportionment at the General Assembly of the States in December of 1962. In a case of strange bedfellows, rural heartland representatives such as Graham who had supported civil rights teamed up with southern "state's rights" activists who had opposed racial integration. Melded from bipartisan legislators from various Federal-State Relations committees, particularly from the National Legislative Conference, from the National Dual Sovereignty Volunteer Committee headed by W. Stuart Helm of Pennsylvania, and from the Florida Commission on Constitutional Government, a new nonprofit organization to combat reapportionment was chartered in Lincoln, Nebraska on February 5, 1964.

The site was purposefully chosen, as the commission was "fully aware of the fact that such a movement would be unsuccessful if it were pinned to the apron of the South." Calling itself "middle of the road conservative," it stood "broadly on constitutional questions and apart from radicalism of any brand." Originally to be called the Commission on Dual Sovereignty, it eventually settled on the National Commission on Constitutional Government, with the motto "Preserve, Protect, and Defend the Constitution of the United States." Although their charter was broader in scope than the reapportionment question, for all intents and purposes, it was the driving force and, when it failed, so failed the rest of their agenda as a commission.

As of June 29, 1964, the commission was made up of state legislators Senator Hal Bridenbaugh, Nebraska, president; Speaker Mallory Horne, Florida, vice president; Representative John Masterton, Vermont, vice president; Senator Jack Schroeder, Iowa, treasurer; Representative J. Curtis McKay, Wisconsin, secretary. The executive director was George R. Prentice, who had been employed by the Florida Commission on Constitutional Government. Board members of the new nonprofit organization were Speaker Thomas D. Graham, Missouri; Representative Merle Lansden, Oklahoma; Lt. Governor John Brown, Ohio; Speaker Byron Tunnell, Texas; Senator Carl Robinson, Wyoming; Representative Nathaniel W. Cabell, South Carolina; Senator Gordon Melody, New Mexico; and Senator Vernon Cheever, Colorado.

The commission backed several proposals designed to return decisions on legislative reapportionment to the states. They began an extensive educational campaign, largely run by George R. Prentice, throughout the country. Looking for a spokesman, they turned to Ronald Reagan. Though "in complete sympathy with what you are doing," Reagan declined to take an active role in the commission, feeling that he was more effective when he had "no particular affiliations."

Due to financial mismanagement, Prentice was forced to resign in late 1964 and Graham took over as executive director. He hired Ernest A. Tupper, a consultant from Washington, DC, to spearhead the commission's efforts. Packets of educational materials were sent to members of the US Congress in early 1965 and several responded personally to Graham, in support of the group's aims, including Gerald R. Ford, Bob Dole, and Strom Thurmond. They already had the support of influential US Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen, who had introduced legislation in Congress to combat reapportionment. Graham and several others spoke out in Congressional hearings on the issue.

In February of 1965, Dirksen believed he had two-thirds of the Senate with him but gradually the perception of it being a civil rights versus state's rights issue had eroded support. Eventually it became a largely partisan issue of Democrats (pro-reapportionment) against Republicans (anti-reapportionment), which was particularly galling for both Graham and Dirksen, the former a Democrat and the latter an influential supporter of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

By the end of 1965, the commission had exhausted its resources and Graham recommended that "the corporation go out of existence," as the torch was passed to an organization whose members were US Senators and Representatives, led by Senator Dirksen. Called the Committee for Government of the People, it campaigned at the national legislative level; however, in the spring of 1966, the apportionment amendment fell seven votes short of the two-thirds majority needed for passage, effectively ending the "Little Federal" system in Missouri and many other states.

On the Missouri front, Graham finally acceded that reapportionment was inevitable and the battle turned to how it was to be accomplished. A plan (Amendment 3) backed by Graham for the House to reapportion itself failed in a statewide election on August 17, 1965, and then, on January 14, 1966, another Amendment 3, the plan favored by Hearnes, passed, putting control of reapportionment in the hands of a bipartisan citizens commission appointed by the governor. Feeling that the powers of the executive branch were already too considerable, Graham had adamantly opposed this amendment, and it was one more battle that contributed to his loss of the speakership.

Upon his retirement in 1973 to pursue his legal practice full-time, the General Assembly passed a resolution recognizing Graham's "skill, clarity and wit in oratory and debate" and praising his leadership and service "as outstanding and marked by devotion to the integrity and independence of the legislative branch of state government."

BILL FILES, 1955-1964

Extent: 2.8 cubic ft. (7 Hollinger boxes)

Arrangement: Chronological and thereunder by bill number

Scope and Content

Bill files contain records of legislation brought before the House and Senate of Missouri in the 68th to 72nd General Assemblies. Some files contain constituent correspondence related to the bill. These files also include some reports and Judiciary Committee meeting minutes and roll calls from the years when Graham was chair. The vast majority of bill files contain only a copy of the printed bill and, if applicable, the voting record in Judiciary Committee. Occasionally, on controversial bills, there may be correspondence from constituents either in support or in opposition to the bill. On rare occasions, there may also be statements made in hearings or background material on the issue.

In the 68th General Assembly (1955-56), the topics of substance were human (or civil) rights, school busing for private and parochial schools, a proposed ban on nudist colonies, and the right to work. In the 69th (1957-58), few controversial topics are covered, as the largest files are on probate courts, Mo-Kan Development Agency, and National Guardsmen license plates and retirement. In the 70th (1959-60), a bill banning textbooks on evolution drew controversy as did a bill prohibiting price advertising of eyeglasses. From the 71st (1961-1962), the bill files are much more sparse and haphazard, with some of the correspondence found in the General Correspondence series as well as in the Legislative Subject Files. Few bill files exist for the 71st but the one on fair employment practices drew a large response. From the 72nd (1963-1964), school busing for parochial and private schools surfaced once again, this time drawing national attention to the issue of separation of church and state as Catholics demonstrated and protested by registering their children at public schools. Also drawing correspondence were a sales tax increase, billboards on highways, and Sunday closing of retail stores.

GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE, 1951-1974

Extent: 1.6 cubic ft. (4 Hollinger boxes)

Arrangement: Chronological

Scope and Content

This series contains incoming and outgoing (copies of) correspondence. Graham separated these files into either personal or legislative correspondence but there is carryover, especially of legislative in the personal and particularly in the early years. Correspondence relating to specific items of legislation can be found in the Bill Files, although there is again some carryover. Stray letters on topics of the times, such as civil rights and Vietnam, can be found here but the only topics of sustained interest are on reapportionment, insurance, and income taxes (bulk 1969). While there are a number of substantive letters on the subject of reapportionment in this series, the bulk from 1965-66 are found in the Legislative Subject Files and in the National Commission on Constitutional Government Files.

Correspondents include state legislators from Missouri and other states; Richard H. Ichord, US Representative from Missouri; Stuart Symington, Edward V. Long, Thomas F. Eagleton, US Senators from Missouri; and James T. Blair, John M. Dalton, and Warren E. Hearnes, governors.

LEGISLATIVE SUBJECT FILES, 1947-1986

Extent: 2.8 cubic ft. (7 Hollinger boxes)

Arrangement: Alphabetical and thereunder chronological

Scope and Content

This series contains a mixture of correspondence, newspaper clippings, articles, and other ephemera on topics related to legislation or to legislators. (Also included are some commission and committee files.) Many files contain largely constituent correspondence. Reapportionment is the largest topic by far and includes correspondence leading up to the 1965 Special Session, covering how Missouri would pick a commission to reapportion the General Assembly. One folder of correspondence from Missouri House members on this topic is of particular note, as it relates their personal views on the subject. Other topics of interest include the controversy over moving the press corps from the House floor to the balcony; communist or socialist teaching at state universities; Lohman's Landing in Jefferson City; and cleaning and restoration of the Thomas Hart Benton murals in the capitol building.

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT FILES, 1954-1967

Extent: 2.0 cubic ft. (5 Hollinger boxes)

Arrangement: Alphabetical and thereunder chronological

Scope and Content

This series contains a wide range of material on the subject of reapportionment, including publications, subject files, progress reports, and correspondence of the National Commission on Constitutional Government (1964-1965). They include the files of George R. Prentice, a former newspaper correspondent from Tallahassee, Florida, who was named the first executive director of the commission in 1964. He was also director of the Florida Commission on Constitutional Government, founded in 1961, with himself as director and chairman as former governor and then state supreme court justice Millard Caldwell. When Prentice was fired for financial mismanagement in late 1964, Graham became his successor, apparently inheriting the files of Prentice, which included publications of state's rights organizations and of anti-Civil Rights correspondence.
