HISTORICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

Charles Henry Hardin was born in Trimble County, Kentucky on July 15, 1820 to Charles and Mary Jewell Hardin. Shortly after the birth of his son, Charles Hardin moved his family to Franklin, Howard County before settling in Columbia. Hardin worked with his mother in the family tanning business after his father died in 1830. From 1837 to 1839, he attended the University of Indiana in Bloomington before transferring to the University of Miami in Oxford, Ohio.

Hardin cofounded the Beta Theta Pi fraternity with John Reily Knox, Samuel Taylor Marshall, David Linton, James George Smith, John Holt Duncan, Michael Clarkson Duncan, and Thomas Boston Gordon in 1839. Hardin returned to Columbia after graduation, was admitted to the Missouri Bar on March 11, 1843, and opened a law practice in Fulton. He married Bonne Femme College graduate Mary Barr Jenkins in Columbia on May 16, 1844. The couple had no children.

Hardin served as an attorney in the 2nd Judicial District from 1848 until 1852 when he was elected as a Whig to the Missouri House of Representatives from Callaway County. He was reelected in 1854 and 1858 and was one of three members selected to revise the Missouri Statutes. He also served as secretary of the first board of managers of the State Lunatic Asylum in Fulton until 1861. Hardin was elected to the Missouri Senate as a conservative Unionist in 1860.

Senator Hardin drafted a resolution calling for a state convention to decide whether Missouri would secede from the union. The resolution included a provision requiring voter approval for secession. The General Assembly voted to remain in the Union; and in October 1861, Governor Claiborne Fox Jackson called a legislative meeting for Neosho hoping to force secession. Hardin attended and voted against secession. His colleagues viewed Hardin's attendance as sympathizing with the South. In 1862, office holders (including Hardin) considered southern sympathizers were removed from office and disenfranchised.

Charles Henry Hardin returned to the family farm in Audrain County and after the war, the family moved to Mexico, Missouri. After taking the required oath of loyalty to the Union, Hardin opened a new law practice. He cofounded the Mexico Southern Bank and founded Hardin Female College. In 1872, he was elected once again to the Missouri Senate, serving as chair of the Judiciary Committee. Hardin was chosen in 1874 as the Democratic Party gubernatorial nominee over General Francis M. Cockrell by the slimmest margin in Missouri history. 159 votes were required for nomination; Hardin received 159%.

After defeating People's Party candidate Major William Gentry of Pettis County in the general election, Charles Henry Hardin was sworn in as Missouri's 22nd Governor on January 12, 1875. Fulfilling a campaign pledge, Hardin allowed no dancing or drinking at the reception following his inauguration. The ceremony itself took place in the House chamber during a joint session of the General Assembly.

Missouri was burdened with enormous debt as the result of Civil War expenditures and various attempts to aid railroad construction. Outstanding state bonds were drawing a high rate of interest but were selling for considerably less than market value. Governor Hardin immediately economized state spending, eliminated wasteful expenditures, refused to assume county war debts, and reduced state indebtedness by over $600,000.

Called by Governor Hardin for the purposes of administering the Missouri State Penitentiary, a special session of the state legislature met in Jefferson City from March 29 through April 1, 1875. The session also focused on legislation pertaining to the Missouri Orphans Home, the school of mines and metallurgy in Rolla, superintendent of public schools, and railroad and property taxes. Legislation was also required for the selection of a suitable state representative and subsequent appropriations to the upcoming National Centennial exhibition in Philadelphia.

A constitutional convention was also called in 1875. Delegates convened in Jefferson City and from May 5th through August 2nd and worked on revising the Missouri Constitution. Proposed new articles focused on city, town, and county matters; revenue and taxation; suffrage and elections; restrictions on the powers and duties of the state legislature; education funding; financial and judicial reform; and on corporate and militia affairs. Missouri voters overwhelmingly passed the 1875 Constitution on October 30, 1875.

During the summers of 1874-1875, hordes of grasshoppers invaded western Missouri, stripping crops and creating economic hardship for Missouri farmers. Every remedy tried by the beleaguered farmers failed. By gubernatorial proclamation, June 3, 1875 was set aside as a day of fasting and prayer. Although rains temporarily drove the grasshoppers out, they returned the following two years. In his farewell address to the General Assembly in 1877, Governor Hardin suggested that other measures be taken to obliterate the insects.

At the conclusion of his term, Governor Hardin returned to private life. He supported the Missouri Military Academy in Mexico; served as president of the Mexico Southern Bank; served on the University of Missouri board of curators; and resumed his association with Hardin Female College. He died on July 29, 1892 and was interred on the family farm. In November 1893, his remains were reinterred in the Jewell Family Cemetery, Columbia. The cemetery is maintained by the Missouri Department of Natural Resources as a State Historic Site.

The General Assembly passed legislation in 1877 authorizing bounties of $5 for a bushel of grasshopper eggs and $1 for a bushel of grasshoppers. Entrepreneurs invented machines designed to suction the insects off standing crops. Missouri entomologist C. V. Ross presented a paper on using the locusts as food, including instructions as how they were to be cooked. Missourians reported to Governor Hardin on the conditions in their home counties; pleaded for state assistance and relief; sent funds for the relief of fellow citizens; notified him of inventions designed to get rid of the pests; commended Hardin for calling for a day of prayer and fasting; and discussed various ways of killing grasshoppers.

Subject correspondence pertaining to Criminal Cases (St. Louis-Wright counties) continues in box 9. The box primarily focuses on fugitives and criminals residing in other states and wanted for crimes in Missouri; and for fugitives wanted for crimes in other state and living in Missouri. These materials, including warrants, capture notices, rewards, and requisitions for extraditions, are filed alphabetically under the state requesting extradition (Criminal Cases—Arkansas, Criminal Cases—Kentucky, Criminal Cases—Ohio, and etcetera). Documents where states could not be ascertained are filed under Criminal Cases—Miscellaneous.
